Notes:

With the pressures of the holidays now past us, things begin to revert to more or less normal. Manga Entertainment gets back to releasing product after their annual holiday shutdown with Black Magic M-66 and Appleseed ... repackages of the old US Renditions subtitled versions of these titles (now with lower pricing). AD Vision releases the final installment of Gunsmith Cats (the delay was no fault of their own:

the Japanese took their sweet time getting this one out) and the third volume of Evangelion. Probably the biggest news this month is CPM/Anime 18 re-releasing the first volume of Twin Angels and the entire three volume set of Urotsuki Doji IV

(both dubbed only ... the harbinger of things to come) with editing to bring them into line with current legislation. In all likelihood, none of these will be released in subtitled versions. We're pleased to now offer the Streamline resin kits and theatrical posters for sale. While these resin kits are a bit on the expensive side and require more than a bit of skill to build, they're all pretty neat! They're also things that just don't pop up on too many store shelves! The New Files series of Patlabor comes out this month... but if you want to see anything later than volume 1, you'll have to splurge for the box set! Finally, if you're a fan of AniMayhem, check out the new AniMayhem expansion packs.

JEFF'S PICK(S) OF THE MONTH

If your interest is adult product, you can't go wrong with Twin Angels 1. Even with the cuts, this is pretty nasty stuff. People have been waiting for the Wings of Honneamis LaserDisc for about a year now, so I'd expect these to do something as well.

The Uncut Violence Jack brick appears this month, giving the consumer the last volume early - the same goes with the Patlabor New Files set. Probably the coolest things this month, though, are the resin kits from Streamline. While most people can't make them come out as good as these kits can look, they're really well thought out and extremely detailed!

Prepare.. coming in February... the Street Fighter II TV Series!
